Day in the Life at Coventry

Hey what do you know more rain! Someone asked me where I lived, I said a rain forest! Horses were out Saturday hopefully will be out Wednesday! Take your blankets home. Vet will be here Monday if anyone needs anything

Show time! Here is a poem I wrote a long time ago 📖

"At the Dressage Show" Entering at 'A'
Wind whispering as it swishes past your eyes Oblivious to the ringside eyes piercing your being alas, one with your horse...
Saluting dressage
as the day's light brightly caresses the equine's active limbs and the passing breeze of forward movement washes your face in delight Rhythmic and bound merging with the animal's striding pulse the rider's still and focused body is relaxed In awe of the power the aids contain the movement the seat absorbs the harmony the thoughts flow with Human and equine whispering communicative technique of body language Back and forth
Forth and back on symmetrical geographical figures within the parameters of contentedness and fulfillment on show day we adorn ourselves Filled with bliss
Every performance grand ©

Men argue, nature acts. - Voltaire.

Sarah riding her new horse Lola (what Lola wants Lola gets) Sarah retired Gershwin and bought Sloane. Below, Gershwin & King romping in their new home! Two very lucky thoroughbreds who found permanent retirement!

Coventry is thinking of adding a few Western Dressage Classes to the show in June. Apparently this has become very popular. Check out the website. They also have a Facebook page. This all started with "Cowboy Dressage"
